

Dear Friends,

Each year brings opportunities for growth and development and this past year was no exception. With the recent opening of the McKenny Center, with its array of community services, and the North Central Health Clinic, we now provide services at 16 locations throughout Detroit. This multitude of locations eases accessibility issues for consumers and also provides us with the opportunity to vary and expand our service options. Our sites reach deep into neighborhoods, where families live and play. By being physically located in their communities we are better able to understand their neighborhood's challenges and strengths and are able to provide services close to where they live. It's the work we do here that matters the most – the work that will help connect the children, adults and families in the communities to the revitalization of Detroit.

Dr. Robert Shaw, CEO

As you look through our report, try to imagine the faces and stories behind the numbers. While we are proud to have served so many people and families, what really matters is the impact on each individual person. Sometimes this impact is easily seen, like when we place a mother in a job that pays enough for her and her children to live independently or when a Head Start student is fully prepared to enter kindergarten ready to learn. Sometimes the impact though is not as overt, like when a teenager no longer has suicidal thoughts or a young adult finds a successful treatment for their anxiety. For some people, the impact comes through knowing that someone cares and help is available when they are ready. Regardless, we look at each person we serve as an opportunity to make a difference and help that person live a healthier, happier life.

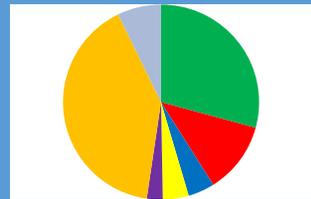

Next year Development Centers will celebrate our 35th Anniversary. It is during these milestones that we feel especially reflective of the work we've done, the people we have helped and the outcomes we have achieved. It is also during these times that we look ahead to what the next milestone will bring. We are fortunate to look at our past and our future with enthusiasm, pride and hope. We hope you will be along for our journey.
